DESCRIPTION:

Since 1930, this journal has been devoted to serving and supporting all who explore, travel, work, or live in hazardous environments ranging from beneath the sea to the outermost reaches of space. The original scientific and clinical articles in Aviation, Space, and Environmental Medicine provide the latest available information on investigations into such areas as ambient pressure changes, motion sickness, increased or decreased gravitational forces, thermal stresses, vision, fatigue, circadian rhythms, psychological stress, artificial environments, health maintenance, human factors engineering, clinical care, and other items of interest to the health care professional.

INTENDED

READERSHIP: Physicians, physiologists, psychologists, nurses, biomedical and human factors engineers, and others working to solve problems of human existence in threatening environments

THIS JOURNAL IS PRINTED ON ACID-FREE PAPER.
