Susan P. Baker Scholarship Launched

A reception was held in November 2012 to officially launch the Susan P. Baker Scholarship in Injury Prevention and Control and celebrate the 25th Anniversary of the Johns Hopkins Center for Injury Research and Policy. Graduates of the Injury Center, mentees of Prof. Baker, school faculty, administration, staff, and current students were all in attendance. Dr. Leon S. Robertson, a long-time supporter of the Injury Center and colleague of Professor Baker joined via a pre-recorded message.

The Susan P. Baker Scholarship was endowed to ensure that Professor Baker's legacy of pioneering research in injury epidemiology will continue for generations to come. Currently, the scholarship will cover tuition for one doctoral student per year, and up to three as the endowment grows. "My work as a mentor has been as important to me as my work in epidemiology," said Professor Baker. "As a mentor to new injury students I have been fortunate to grow the field of injury research. Through the endowment of this scholarship, we are doing even more to ensure that the field of injury research will continue to grow for years to come."

This year also marks the 25th anniversary of The Johns Hopkins Center for Injury Research and Policy. Started in 1987 by Susan Baker, the Injury Center was the first of its kind in the country and spawned the National Center for Injury Prevention Control at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. The current Center director, Andrea Gielen, ScD, who was on hand to celebrate the Center's success and look forward to the future, said "Like so many of us in the field, I am also here in part because of the work of Sue Baker. It is truly an honor to celebrate the start of the Susan P. Baker Scholarship and the 25th anniversary of the Injury Center. We look forward to the next 25 years of injury prevention research at Johns Hopkins University."

Susan Baker is a Fellow of the Aerospace Medical Association, has served on the Advisory Editorial Board twice and as co-chair of the Aviation Safety Committee, and is an honorary member of the Wing. She has received the Association's John Paul Stapp and Harry G. Moseley Awards. Her research has included crashes related to mountain flying, instructional flights, commuter flights, and air medical transport. Her Aviation Safety course at Johns Hopkins has encouraged many students to publish articles in the field. She is an ardent advocate of policy changes that will prevent injuries.
